In summer days, you might often hear people say that they're "sweating buckets". What are they talking about? Of course, they don't have buckets coming out of their skin, but they are probably sweating a lot.

Sweating is your body's way of cooling itself. When your body does, it produces(产生) heat. Whether you are exercising, eating or even sleeping, your body produces heat all the time.

Your body needs to keep the temperature of about 37℃. And the temperature of your body should always be the same if you are fine, no matter whether the weather is hot or cold. That is why the doctor takes your temperature when you are sick.

During hot summer months, your body temperature can rise quickly. To keep yourself from overheating, your body uses your blood and skin to get rid of excess (过多的) heat. As your blood heats up, it carries the heat to the skin. This causes your sweat glands(汗腺) to produce sweat.

As sweat comes out of the tiny holes on your skin, it evaporates(蒸发) and cools the skin. One drop of sweat can cool one liter of blood by about 0.5℃.

Your body is losing water as you sweat. Therefore, it's important to drink plenty of water and stay well hydrated(保持体内水分充足).

The day was like any other day in his life. Tom walked past the shop on the street corner. He stopped to look at the front row of the shoes, and he felt happy to see that the pair of shoes he wanted very much was still there. Looking down at his old shoes, he felt sorry for himself. He really wanted to have them for his birthday.

He walked away sadly and thought how to tell his mother about it. He knew she would give him anything he liked if she could. But he also knew very well she had little money. He decided not to go home at once, because if he looked sad, his mother would notice it. So he went to the park and sat on the grass.

Then he saw a boy in a wheelchair(轮椅). He noticed that the boy moved the wheels with his hands. Tom looked at him carefully and was surprised to see that the boy had no feet. He looked down at his own feet. "It's much better to be without shoes than without feet," he thought. So there was no reason for him to feel so sorry and sad. He went away and smiled, thinking he was happier.

Paper is one of the most important products ever invented by man. The invention of paper meant that more people could get a good education because people could print more books. Paper provided an important way to spread(传播) information.

According to Chinese historical records, Cai Lun, an official during the Han Dynasty, made paper successfully in about 105 A.D. He took the inner bark(树皮) of a tree and bamboo, mixed them with water, and pounded them with a wooden tool. He then put this mixture onto a piece of cloth and let the water through, leaving only the fibers(纤维) on the cloth. After it dried, Cai Lun discovered that he had created a good writing thing. It was easy to make and carry.

People introduced Chinese papermaking to Vietnam and later to Japan in the beginning, but the papermaking process was kept secret in Silk Road trading.

During the Tang Dynasty and the Song Dynasty, many kinds of paper appeared, including bamboo paper and Xuan paper.

By the end of the 7th century, the papermaking process reached India, Nepal, Pakistan, and Bangladesh. About in the 11th century, the invention got to Europe.

As a student, your teacher may ask you to write a movie review(评论). At first it may seem like a piece of cake, but when you actually sit down to write it, you may find it hard. Here are the steps for you.

Get Basic Information of the Movie

Get basic information like the movie plot(情节), director, subject and places. Find more information about the story and background(背景) on the subject.

Watch the Movie Twice

Before you start to write the review, you need to watch the movie twice. While doing so, you need to make the best use of your sense of observation(观察力). Write down all the important information so that you can always refer to it.

Make an Outline(大纲) for Your Review

Now that the pre-writing part is realized, the real job begins—writing the movie review. Start by introducing the movie simply. Use the basic writing rule here: Begin your writing with a phrase or short sentence. I personally advise you to use a conversation or sentence from the movie which shows its subject.

Finish Your Review

Following the outline, you can write your review more easily. What you need to do is adding more information to every part. During writing, you can get help from previous(先前的) reviews. You can make your review interesting by comparing the plot of the movie with that of one similar movie, giving special explanations of good parts or adding different thoughts to the movie.

1. This passage was written for _____.

A. teachers B. students C. doctors D. parents

2. The underlined phrase "doing so" refers to _____.

A. watching the movie twice
B. finding basic information
C. writing the review carefully
D. making a simple outline

3. What is the first step of the real job?

A. Collecting basic information.
B. Watching the movie carefully.
C. Catching the readers' attention.
D. Introducing the movie in simple words.

4. Which is NOT the way of making the review interesting?

A. Giving special explanations of good parts.
B. Adding different ideas to the movie.
C. Adding more information to every part.
D. Comparing the movie with other movies of the similar type.

5. What is the purpose of the passage?

A. To advise us to see a movie.
B. To ask us to write a movie review.
C. To tell us something about a new movie.
D. To teach us how to write a movie review.

There was an ice block in the middle of the forest one morning. It was a big block of ice. But what interested the animals most was the treasure they could see inside it.

As soon as they saw it, all the animals ran towards the block, trying to get the treasure out. But there was a weasel(鼬鼠). He didn't move.

The elephant was using his body to hit the block. Several monkeys, thinking the block was made of cold water, tried to lick the block away with their tongues(舌头). All the animals were trying to break the block, but ended up failing.

However, just then someone said, "Look! Something is moving inside the block!"

In fact, it was the weasel. He soon came out with the treasure. They were all surprised to see how the weasel had gotten the treasure without breaking the block.

The weasel told them that before doing that he had taken some time to think and watch. He thought he could get in under the block by digging a tunnel(隧道). At the end of the tunnel he built a small fire. It quickly melted a hole in the ice.

The weasel did it by showing everyone that one can achieve more by thinking about problems rather than by jumping into action at once.

1. What were the animals interested in most?

When I was a child, my aunt liked making southern-style sweet tea, but I never really drank much tea as an adult until recently.

After reading about its health benefits(好处), I thought I'd start drinking tea more often. Over the last several months, I have found the joy of drinking tea in all its different forms. I've mostly been drinking Chinese tea, but I've tried some others as well.

As far as Chinese tea goes, my favorites are black tea and chrysanthemum(菊花) tea. Chrysanthemum tea has a light and sweet taste, while black tea gives me the energy I need to get through the day.

Speaking of black tea, you'd be surprised at how common it is in other parts of the world. Remember that southern-style sweet tea I mentioned? Although it's an American drink, it uses black tea as its base(基础成分). It is sweetened with sugar and fruit. And unlike black tea in China, people usually drink sweet tea with ice.

I tried British tea as well. Most Chinese people make tea with loose(零散的) leaves, but in Britain, people use tea bags. They like to add milk to it, but I like the pure(纯粹的) taste of tea more.

This is just the start of my tea adventure(冒险). I'm sure there are even more flavors and types that are just waiting for me to try.

1. The writer started drinking tea more often because of _____.

A. tea's good taste
B. tea's health benefits
C. the writer's habits
D. the writer's more free time

2. The writer should drink _____ when he wants to get some energy.

A. black tea
B. sweat tea
C. British tea
D. chrysanthemum tea

3. What does the underlined word "It" refer to?

A. Ice.
B. Black tea.
C. Sugar.
D. Southern-style sweet tea.

4. What can we know from the passage?

A. The writer only drank Chinese tea.
B. The writer doesn't like the tea with milk.
C. People usually drink black tea with ice in China.
D. The writer liked drinking tea when he was a child.

5. What's the main idea of the passage?

A. How to taste tea.
B. The tea's benefits.
C. How to make sweet tea.
D. The writer's adventure of drinking tea.

There was once a painter who had two daughters. One daughter was beautiful, and the other was ugly. The painter liked his beautiful daughter very much and asked her to be the model for his paintings.

The ugly daughter didn't get much attention from her father. She was sad and often wept in her room. The girls' mother was also sad about her ugly daughter. One day, she came into the ugly daughter's room, got a tear(眼泪) from the girl and planted it in the garden.

The tear soon grew into a beautiful flower. The flower was so beautiful that the painter started to paint it. The ugly daughter was happy about that. However, the beautiful daughter became unhappy, because his father stopped painting her.

At night, when everyone fell asleep, the beautiful daughter went to the garden and picked the flower and threw it away.

The next morning, the ugly daughter went to the garden and found the flower was missing. She was sad and cried. The beautiful daughter went to her room and said, "Do you think that one day you can wear the flower and become as beautiful as me? That's impossible, so don't cry."

The ugly daughter stopped crying and said, "I'm crying not for myself. I look after the flower because I want to let you wear it. It will make you much more beautiful. But now, it has gone."

Hearing the words, the beautiful daughter was sorry for what she had done. Later, she didn't care much about her face, because she knew that being kind was more important.

1. Why was the ugly girl sad at first?

A. Because she thought she was ugly.
B. Because her mother was sad about her.
C. Because her sister was a nice model.
D. Because her father didn't pay much attention to her.

2. The underlined word "wept" can be replaced(代替) by _____.

A. cried　　B. shouted　　C. stayed　　D. hid

3. After the tear grew into a flower, _____.

A. the ugly girl became beautiful
B. the mother picked the flower
C. the father didn't paint anymore
D. the beautiful daughter was unhappy

4. From the passage, we can find the ugly girl is _____.

A. lazy　　B. lonely　　C. kind　　D. shy

5. The passage mainly tells us _____.

A. people should care about their look
B. a person's inside is more important than the outside
C. people should help each other when they are in trouble
D. parents should get on well with their children

There was an old man who had four sons. He wanted his sons not to judge(判断) things too quickly, so he sent one at a time to go and look at a pear tree that was far away.

The first son went in winter, the second son in spring, the third son in summer and the youngest son in fall. When they all came back home, the father called them together to describe what they had seen.

The first son said that the tree was ugly.

The second son said it was beautiful because it was covered with green buds (蓓蕾) and full of hope.

The third son said it was full of flowers that looked very beautiful.

The youngest son said it was full of fruit.

The old man then explained to his sons that they were all wrong because they each just saw one season of the tree's life. He told them not to judge how a tree was by only one season. Marina and Mia are twins. Even their parents find it hard to tell the difference between them. Although they look the same, the girls are different in most other ways. They don't have many things in common. Mia likes hot food, while Marina prefers sweet food. Mia likes to study at night, while Marina prefers the morning.

They often fight with each other about these things. For example, when Mia says that waking up early in the morning is terrible, Marina argues, "Mornings are fresh. It is difficult to stay up late at night when I feel sleepy!"

Their parents decided to put an end to their arguments and teach them that they both could be correct.

Their father asked Mia to stand on one side of a board, while Marina stood on the other side. They couldn't see each other's side. Their mother asked, "What color is the board?" Mia said it was black, while Marina said it was white. They started arguing again. Their parents asked them to change sides.

They were both quite surprised. Mia's side was black and Marina's was white. Both of them were correct.

Many of us are like Mia and Marina. We may say that we are right most of the time, but never forget that others can be right as well.

A group of frogs were jumping through the woods. When two of them fell into a deep hole, all of the other frogs came around the hole to help their friends. When they saw how deep the hole was, the rest of the group agreed that it was hopeless.

The two frogs didn't want to die. They began to try their best to jump. Some of the frogs shouted that it was hopeless. The other frogs continued shouting that they should save their energy and give up. The two frogs continued jumping as hard as they could. After several hours of effort, they were quite tired.

Finally, one of the frogs believed what their friends said and died. The other frog continued to jump, although he was tired. At last, he jumped out of the hole.

The other frogs were surprised and asked, "Why did you continue jumping when we told you it was impossible?" The frog explained to them that he was deaf, and that when he saw their gestures and shouting, he thought they were cheering him up.

This simple story tells us that our encouraging words can lift someone up and help him or her make it through difficulty.

Most teens need 8 to 10 hours of sleep each night, but many teens have sleeping problems. These problems can influence everything. For example, it can influence sports performance, and increase our chances of getting sick.

How can we get good sleep we need? Here is some advice.

Be active during the day. You've probably noticed how much running around little kids do and how well they sleep. Get at least 60 minutes of exercise a day. Physical activity can reduce(减少) stress and help people feel more relaxed.

Keep away from coffee. Lots of people think that coffee will make them relaxed, but that's not true. Coffee can stop sleep, increasing a person's chance of waking up in the middle of the night.

Keep a good sleep habit. Going to bed at the same time every night helps the body expect sleep. Developing a set(固定的) bedtime habit can improve the rest effect. So relax every night by reading, listening to music, spending time with a pet, or doing anything else that relaxes you.

Expect a good night's sleep. Stress can make people awake, so the more you worry about sleeping, the more serious your sleeping problems are. Instead of worrying that you won't sleep, remind yourself that you can. Say "Tonight, I will sleep well" several times during the day. It can also help to practice breathing before bed.

根据短文内容,判断下列句子正(T)误(F)。

( ) 1. The writer shows us four pieces of advice on how to sleep well.

( ) 2. You'd better exercise at least two hours a day to make you sleep well.

( ) 3. If you drink coffee, you may feel relaxed and have a good sleep all night.

( ) 4. Before going to bed, you can relax yourself by reading a book.

( ) 5. Worrying too much can influence your sleep.
